The Prosper window stickers are a mark of achievement and demonstrates a home's level of commitment to promoting the safer provision of care for every resident. E Coli and UTI'S

Did you know that E-Coli is a germ that can cause UTI'S?

E coli is a germ that can quite happily live in the bowel but can also cause infections in your urine or blood. Women are more susceptible to UTI'S due to how close their bowel and the tube from their bladder are.

Ecoli in the blood causes Ecoli blood stream infections otherwise known as SEPIS which can be fatal. Ecoli infection can be prevented with a few simple steps

Urine infection symptoms can include an urgent frequent need to pee, often with little urine passed. Other symptoms can include a bladder fullness, a burning sensation when peeing, and pelvic pain. Foul smelling urine, cloudy, brownish or pink in colour or tinged with blood.

Symptoms of SEPIS can include a high temperature, not passing urine all day, more confused than normal, stomach pains, lower back pain and feeling sick. If SEPSIS is suspected urgent medical treatment is required.

> KEEP THE ECOLI GERM AWAY

Issue Ninety September 2022

How to keep E Coli free

- Drinking plenty of water is the main way to keep E coli free as the fluid flushes bacteria out of your system.
- Wash hands thoroughly after using the toilet
- Wash hands thoroughly after dealing with urinary catheters
- Ladies- wipe from front to back
- Wash hands thoroughly before eating
- Change pads when soiled
- Keep Genitals clean

Manning's Methodology Corner Plan, Do, Study Act Cycles

Last month I talked through an everyday example of how a Plan, Do, Study, Act (PDSA) cycle works, in this case making a journey to a new destination. This month I want to show an example that would be relevant to social care.

You could have set a SMART Aim like this:

By end of 2022 there will be no more than four people per month being treated for a UTI.

You may then feel that good hydration will be key to achieving this aim, including accurate record of how much a resident is drinking. So it may be useful to give yourself a period to get systems in place to achieve this, consequently your initial PDSA cycle may reflect this and you may want to consider the below:

Plan – Don't rush into starting your cycle, spend some time planning. What systems need to be in place to get an accurate measurement of what someone is drinking? Is new drinking equipment required? And how will it be recorded? You may want to reassess all residents recommended hydration targets, so staff members would need to be allocated that task. It is important that all staff are aware of what is required of them, otherwise you may come into work on the second day and find nobody has been continuing the processes being trialled. It is recommended to put names to actions during the planning stage and decide how long the cycle will run for. A prediction of the expected outcome should be made at this point too.

Do – Only after conducting a thorough planning process should you commence the trial. Noting what is working well and things that may be working as well as intended.

Issue Ninety September 2022

Study – At the end of the planned 'Do' period you are then evaluating how it has worked. Do staff and residents feel it has worked well? Has an increase in individual's hydration levels been noted? Are you seeing a deduction in the number of people requiring treatment for a UTI? And how does this match the prediction that was made during the 'Plan' stage?

Act – This is where you decide what you are going to do moving forward. Has this been so successful that you want to embed it into your processes? Does the process need 'tweaking' slightly to be successful? (A fresh PDSA cycle could then be started). Or has the trial not had an impact at all. Remember not every initiative you trial will be a success, but there is learning to be made from every PDSA cycle you conduct.

As always, it is recommended that you record your PDSA cycle on a PDSA worksheet for future reference, and evidence of your quest for continual improvement.

In Loving Memory

'Poem by Sue Smith, Manager at Cherrywood Grange

My subjects; Thank you for letting me reign as your QUEEN! But my husband called for me in my DREAM! 💙

He was looking down and could see I was so TIRED! He knew I missed him and needed to be back at his SIDE!

I was torn as I didn't want to LEAVE, please understand this when you GRIEVE!

I did my best I've worn the royal CROWN! but towards the end it pulled me DOWN!

My life has been good and rewarding TOO, I loved looking after all of YOU!

My passing is not the end as heaven opens its GATE! It's a new beginning so mark this DATE! ♥

I'll carry on ruling with the Angels and Philip by my SIDE! I'm still your QUEEN I haven't DIED! 🎔

I have just gone to heaven, my place of REST! because GOD told me he only takes the BEST! 💙
